Remarks

Handling of Photos, Videos, and Recordings at ICPE2024

When hosting a lecture or a similar event, please include the following statement in a prominent place on the homepage or equivalent platform:

"The copyrights for photos, videos, etc. (including recordings of online meeting tools) from this event, including the rights to translation and adaptation under Article 27 and the original author's rights to use derivative works under Article 28, shall in principle belong to the speakers and presenters. If the speakers or the presenters cannot grant permission for use to the ICPE Organizing Committee, please notify the person in charge accordingly. In addition, while photos, videos, etc. may be sold by the Society, please understand that any proceeds from such sales will not be distributed back to the speakers or participants."

"Please note that the ICPE Organizing committee may take photographs and videos during this event. These may be published or archived in the IPA's journals, various newsletters, websites, or on video services approved by the IPA. Please be aware that this is particularly likely to be the case for major speakers and award winners."

Announcement of the Release of the IPA Terminology Database on Press-in Engineering

The International Press-in Association (IPA) is pleased to announce that, on the occasion of this international conference, the IPA Terminology Database will be publicly available on the official IPA website (www.press-in.org) within July 2024. IPA members can access the database early via the Members Site (<https://member.press-in.org/en/login>).

Overview of the Terminology Database:

- Bilingual (English-Japanese) Excel spreadsheet format
- Includes 572 terms

The database aims to enhance understanding and utilization of press-in piling. It is an essential tool for all activities related to Press-in Engineering, and we strongly encourage its use.
